Overview

Job posts: 200 words that matter more than you think

It's a big marketplace out there. Hundreds of internet job sites post millions of global listings every day. Employers can cast a wide net. Job seekers can apply from their smartphones. Today's recruiters and hiring managers are swimming in a world of applicants and options.

Unfortunately, that's not as fun as it sounds. The trick isn't finding people. It's finding the right person. You have to do more than sell them on the job. You have to sell them on the company. They need to picture themselves in your workplace, and growing in their career.

And the first tool at your disposal is the job description: a couple hundred words that should not only sell a particular role, but also advertise your company and brand.

The good news? Most job posts are remarkably bland. Because few companies give them much time and thought, you have the chance to stand out. A well-crafted job description can make a world of difference. So can recruiting tools designed to get that post in front of the right people.

With these proven practices and ready-made job descriptions, you have a good head start for landing the perfect candidate.

Tips for customizing your template

How to make your post stand out in a crowd

Your ready-made job description is a great head start. Now it's time to finish the job.

You'll want to customize your job post to the specific needs of your company. And by following a few simple rules of thumb, you can make it even more attractive to your ideal candidate.

✓ Promote your company culture

You're not just describing a job, you're pitching the company. Give candidates a glimpse of your corporate culture – what makes it a great place to work?

✓ Be specific where it counts

Give a clear, concise description of the roles and duties of the job. Always quantify the experience level you need.

✓ Target people moving up, not sideways

You want people who've done the work before, but you also want motivated candidates looking for fresh opportunities. Appeal to their aspirations – include challenges and growth potential.

✓ Optimize your bullet points

A multitude of requirements can weed out unqualified candidates. They can also discourage people with valuable, if different, experience. Try keeping your mandates to 4–5 bullet points.

✓ Speak human, avoid buzzwords

If you want a data analyst, don't ask for a data ninja. If you're looking for someone to leverage best practices, you need to explain what that means. Keep it simple, human, and warm.

Three of the most viewed job posts on LinkedIn

It's no surprise that big names and dynamic companies² attract job-seekers. But with a well-crafted job post even small companies can compete for top talent. Take a look at what they do well and tips for making the description work better.

Good

- Establishes corporate culture and aspirational challenge up top
- Don't shy away from the demanding duties of the job

Tip

A shorter list of requirements works best. Try prioritizing with 4-5 bullet points.

Job description

The Role:
We tell the stories that connect people with Tesla's mission and products. The global communications team is made up of curious, tough, quick-witted, entrepreneurial people. Tesla is an exceptional company because we hire exceptional individuals.

The Tesla Communications Manager will create and drive compelling narratives, campaigns, and announcements around Tesla's business. They will draft public statements, write press communications, pitch, pitch, and pitch some more. The role requires a communications rockstar with proven media pitching skills and media outreach experience, and a strong record of placing high-impact stories in lifestyle media, key regional newspapers, broadcast, and leading travel and lifestyle blogs.

We protect Tesla's reputation and we inspire our communities. This role requires a creative problem solver who can balance the daily distractions without losing focus on placing the valuable stories that show the world the benefits of Tesla's products.

This role requires communication with partners, customers, investors and, of course, journalists. You will work closely with marketing, sales, and engineering, and most importantly the Tesla team. You must be solution oriented, flexible, self-driving and have the ability to change course quickly, think big and start small, and thrive in a high-stress environment.

Responsibilities:

- Design and deliver creative communications campaigns and narratives.
- Drive awareness of our products through stories in relevant publications and through awareness campaigns.
- Build and maintain relationships with key media.
- Consistently and doggedly correct misinformation and inaccuracies.
- Manage product launches and announcements.
- Develop written materials, including product messaging, communications plans and
- FAQs, blog posts, and other collateral.

Requirements:

- Bachelor's degree or relevant experience
- A minimum 7 years experience.
- A self-starter who instinctively and consistently creates personal and professional stretch goals and meets them.
- Works well with others with the ability to build trust with the team and work effectively in a highly collaborative team environment
- Skilled at planning, organizing, prioritizing and executing simultaneous projects and activities. -Proven ability to work well under pressure and adapt quickly to change.
- Excellent writing and editing skills.
- Curiosity and ability to think creatively, flexibility, and a sense of humor.
